Hi,

This is a group devoted to the discussion of Ham Radio DXing using low power (100 watts down to milliwatts...or lower). Contesting, QSL routes, Antennas, Hints and Tips, etc...are all topics that are welcome here, come join the fun.

Cheers and 73,

Adam Taylor, N7YA

Hi Gang! its been quiet on this list for a while...but i thought i would break the silence to remind you all of two things....first, this weekend is the ARRL DX CW contest! get your rigs and keys all tuned up and score some new ones!
Next order, there is a new club if you havent heard about it yet...it began as sort of a play on the FOC exclusivity, called the Second Class Operators club, or SOC. membership is free, you get a member number, a membership certificate, our SOC marathon sprint on March 11, a cool website and of course...there is the SOC reflector which i threw together and administer (woohoo!)
The whole point of the club is to have fun however we want to, as long as we are enjoying ham radio...and to revel in the fact that noones perfect and thats ok.
If you would like to join the email reflector, and maybe the club, send a blank email to SecondClassOpsClub-subscribe@egroups.com...then follow the instructions that will be sent to you...then youre on the list! or you could contact me and i will do it for you. its pretty active right now, with new club members joining all the time...we are closing in on 300!...the reflector alone has nearly 70 members and it was only created a few days ago. theres lots of useful info there as well...lots of nice, fun folks too!
If you are interested in joining the SOC, and getting a nifty certificate for the price of a SASE, then contact Tim Pettibone, K5OI at K5OI@.....hes the club secretary, and keeper of the numbers.
Hope to see you all on the member list on the webpage....and if you want to take a look at the webpage then go to http://soc-hams.homepage.com....its all about fun and freedom to be yourself while enjoying our hobby. join us!

ok...shameless plug finished...hope to hear you all on the air for the ARRL contest this weekend!

Last night I called FO0AAA on 24 MHz for at least an hour. No luck. Got discouraged and went to bed. Today, things have improved considerably:

7 MHz - about a dozen calls
10 MHz - 1 call
18 MHz - 2 calls
24 MHz - 1 call

The secret, as always, is to figure out where the DX operator is listening. After the demand dies down, maybe I'll try SSB?

It took me about an hour and a half, but I finally worked TX0DX on 20 CW Friday night. Tonight, I called them for about an hour on 12 meters but just couldn't break through the gigantic pileup. Finally got discouraged and QSYed to 15 meters to see if there were any JAs around. Unbelievably, I heard TX0DX just getting cranked up on 21.024 and not yet spotted on anyone's packet cluster. Worked them on second call.
Except for this piece of good luck, it has been entirely too much like work trying to QSO this new country. I've just GOT to get some better antennas up!

Hi all, i will soon be looking for a logging program that can handle a lot of duties...im a stickler for details and tracking. whats the best program on the market, or comparable, that i can get?
Also keep in mind that i will want to enter all the log entries i have on paper from years past (i know im crazy)...this way i can look up a certain call when i work him and see if ive worked him before, and tracks awards and contest qso's.
Im very new to computer logging...like, "i havent a clue" type new, so if what im asking for is the basic then i will be open to any ideas...i really appreciate the help! Thanks.

I use Logic 5 for win 95/98 and it does everything you would want to do. You can look it up in QST and it does cost over 100.00, but like I said it does more than you will get out of the other programs. I even run my FT-1000MP from my computer and it does all the logging by itself, all you do is put in the call. if you need to know more just ask.

The last time this subject got a good going-over on the DX reflector, the consensus seemed to be in favor of DX4WIN. Although I don't have it (I'm still using the WJ2O logging program), I have used it at a club station, and I think it's excellent and I intend to buy it.

Although it would be fun to have all my QSOs since 1959 in the computer, I decided to go back only to 1987 for old log data. In two and a half years, I've only got 12,600 records entered, and still have 14 logbooks to go. I'm a REALLY slow typist! All this logging is an awful lot like work.

I can second both recommendations...those two programs seem to be what the majority of the stateside hams are using. Myself, I have been using spreadsheet programs since 1988 for logging...allows me to customize. However, I am in the process of creating a master log which I will convert to one of the above later this year.

Hi all, i havent seen any action on this list in a while and figured i had better put some here before egroups realized they needed the space and dropped us.
Since my last post, which was a long time ago, i have put some great dx into the log. keep in mind that i still run the 35 w. into indoor wires on cw only...and i am limited to essentially 4 bands (hard to do 80 from an apartment). since our last meeting i pulled in the following, complete with dates and managers if any:

ZK3CW 10/10/99 Via SM0AGD
ZK2ZL (Niue Is) 10/13/99 Via DJ7RJ
R1ANF/A 10/13/99 Via RK1PWA
BD4ED (Chong Ming Is, AS-136) 10/17/99 Via Box 085299 Shanghai, R O C
T30CW 10/29/99 Via DL7DF
T32PO 11/25/99 Via N5PO
LX4B 11/27/99 Via LX1TI
ZD8A 11/28/99 Via N6CW
9G5AA 11/28/99 Via GM4FDM (i think)
CN8WW 11/28/99 Via DL6FBL or buro
A35RK (first qso of 2000) 1/1/00 Via W7TSQ
VP6BR 2/19/00 Via OH2BR
MD/DL3OI 2/19/00 Via HOME CALL??
OA4SS 2/19/00 Via KB6J (nice turnaround)
6V6U 2/20/00 Via K3IPK
3D2RK 2/20/00 Via W7TSQ
5N0W 2/20/00 Via OK1KN
XF4LWY 3/5/00 Via XE1LWY
FO0AAA 3/6/00 Via N7CQQ (nothing yet though)
TX0DX 3/27/00 Via OH2BN (for hf only)
HF0POL 4/5/00 Via SP3WVL
FO0HWU (Australs) 4/9/00 Via F6HWU
5H3US 4/15/00 Via WA8JOC
EX8W 4/16/00 Via UA3AGS
FK8HZ 4/30/00 Via F6DLN
FW/G3SXW 5/14-19/00 Via his home call
JW5LJA 5/20/00 Via LA5LJA

There are a lot of others but these were the best ones (for a left coaster anyway). i hope this info has helped those who have some of them and still need a route, or manager for a specific time frame, etc...other than that, im just bragging because im proud of them, heh heh.
But i love to see what other guys have in the log....post your own brag sheets, with the routes. it might help some of us out....and it will give you a chance to brag!

I was just logging in a bunch of YU cards that came through the bureau last month. Most of them were for the period 1993-1997. The oldest one was for a QSO with 4N9N in September 1989. Remember this the next time you feel like complaining about your bureau: it could be the YU bureau! By the way, I have only praise for the 3-Land Bureau. The PA DX Association does an absolutely outstanding job. I always put four units of postage on my bureau envelopes (enough for about 35 or 36 cards), but the guy who sorts my cards keeps putting on extra postage and sending 60 or 70 cards per envelope. I write him and tell him he doesn't have to do that, but he does it anyway, so every once in a while I send him ten or fifteen extra 23 cent stamps. I hope the rest of you fare as well with your respective bureaux as we 3-landers do.

Topic: 38 Message: 38

Hello all, just a note to let you all know that I have done a little cleaning up in the management area of my lists, including LowPowerDx, BugsandKeys, SecondClassOpsClub and Coastal Radio.
The changes are just a step towards cleaning up the spam that invades each list from time to time, as well as other safety measures.
Changes that were made include: all posts with attachments will never see the light of day...or your computer screens. if you wish to send an attachment to a list, please just let me know what it is. if you are known on the list the chances are pretty good that it is nothing to be concerned with. this is directed towards the rising number of viruses that are out there. it may not eliminate the problem entirely, but it will sure cut it back a bit.
Second, all new members first posts will be read by me...but only the first post. i just want to see what they are about. i wish i didnt have to do this, but spam dictates otherwise. once i have determined that the new list member is legit and ready to join as one of us, this little slice of neo-censorship will affect the new pledge no further...sort of an initiation....i guess.
Also, i have narrowed down the accessibility for posts to just members...it is now an official 'discussion group', not open anymore.
These changes are mostly for the lowpowerdx, bugsandkeys and coastalradio groups...some of these things will be in effect for SOC, but it is a much larger group and hasnt had much of a spam problem.
Anyway, this is only a step in making these lists a more enjoyable place for everyone...noone wants to read spam or get viruses from an email list..and neither do I!!
With this in mind, i will also attempt to promote these lists to gain more membership....we could all use new friends.
Thanks for sticking with me on this!

Thank You Paul! Im just a ham like the rest...i dont create these lists as an ego trip, i just like a meeting place for hams to discuss a particular topic in more detail with out getting yelled at for carrying on a thread too long.
Like i said before, i just want everyone to feel comfortable and among like

Dear colleagues.

I have one small request for you.

I am a radio amateur with 12 years experience. But on January 12, 2001, I had a misfortune.

The flat where I live burned down. It is very bad. At the given moment I live with my parents.

All my wireless equipment was burned. And I can not allow myself in the nearest 4 years to purchase myself the new apparatus.

Please, if you are offended by this request I have written, simply ignore this letter.

If you still have old equipment, antennas, amplifiers, power supplies, etc, Please do not throw them away.

If you are in a situation where you can send me used equipment or sell it to me cheaply please let me know.

I would be grateful for any help.

Still need to order the "bureau" cards (they can print 1000 cheaper than I can).

Just waiting on one more card (3Y0C) to make it onto the DXCC honor roll for the first time in 30 years of DXing with 100w or less! Never owned an amp, biggest antenna is a 2-ele 10m yagi in the attic fixed on EU, other antennas are a Cushcraft AV-5 on the ground and a 15m dipole in the attic. Made my 5BDXCC last year. Had my first DXpedition as ZF2RR last November, scoring 850K points in CQWW CW on 10 meters low-power only (2542 QSOs).

I haven't been active lately (within the last two or three weeks) but I had been doing some good DXing using SSB and the K2 at 5 watts output about a month or so ago. Seldom use SSB but decided to give it a try at the urging of several readers of QRP Power. Seems that there is more to QRP than CW! (Imagine that !)

I got a wild hair and broke my own promise not to create any more email groups...but i saw an actual need for this one.
Its called HamManuals, and to subscribe, just send a blank email to HamManuals-subscribe@yahoogroups.com
The group is simple and probably will be a pretty quiet list, methinks. Its mainly an avenue for hams looking to buy, sell or get info or scans about manuals of a ham or computer nature...if you are trying to buy or sell that hard to find manual, try this list out...but we need bodies! come sign up and throw a list of manuals, or whatever you are looking for, out there.
Im guessing it will be minimal traffic so an overload in your inbox should be unlikely. and for those who are opposed to new lists because they feel it will break up the cozy circle, its no big deal...i have never seen a list go belly up because someone else started a list too.
I hope this is a service you can use, please help out and join...and help the ham fraternity to keep growing.

Thanks for reading!
